

Please let XM radio continue to provide the innovative programing that I have come to love, expect, and brag on. I tell everyone I know about how I love my XM radio. That is what NAB is really afraid of, competition. It reminds me of the TV Networks complaining when cable started to become popular, or the movie industry complained about VCRs. Both didn't like the competition because they had become lazy and complacent. Now, it's the NAB's turn. Their only reason they are complaining is because they see money going to someone else. So, why is the money going to someone else? Because XM radio is providing a service people want and are willing to pay for it. That is capitalism at it's best. Don't allow NAB to use it's power and stop what made this country great. Let XM radio provide the service it's customers want and expect. Let them continue to provide weather, traffic, and whatever else they think their customers want. Let the free market decide.
